UXTRY! HERE'S LANDLORD WHO REDUCES RENT!

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Boston.—Found at last the landlord who has reduced rents of his 1000-unit, Inc., Shapira, who controls 350 apartments, has agreed to prove rentals.

"Any landlord can do it," he said. "They are robbers if they don't, and deserve what they will get. I'm going to lead this fight in the reduction of rents."

Herbert E. Dietz, chairman of the mayor's rent and housing commission, said Sunday that Shapira's action was the most favorable indication that rents were coming down generally.

JOHN DIETZ CLAIMS HARP STILL ALIVE AND WANTS DAMAGE

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

John F. Dietz, "J. C. of Cameron Dam," who was pardoned several months ago after serving 10 years at Waupun for the alleged murder of Oscar Hart, has filed an application with the state board of grievances for a hearing to present a claim for damages against the state, alleging false imprisonment.

Receipt of the application has been acknowledged, with the statement that the hearing would be set later, Mr. Dietz said Friday.

Mr. Dietz has been collecting evidence with which to back his claim that Hart is living. He showed an affidavit, signed by a resident of Waukesha county, to the effect that the same had been seen and spoken to Hart at Salt Lake City, Utah, in October 1919, three years after the alleged slaying.

The affiant, the affidavit states, had known Hart for years prior to the "battle of Cameron Dam," and recognized him by several scars on his face, and by his general appearance.

Mr. Dietz also displayed a copy of the expense record of Waupun county in the trial, which he said included no charges for the post mortem said to have been performed on Hart, nor expenses for the coroner's inquest.

COW TESTING ASSOC'N WILL VISIT MADISON

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Erlkorn—The Erlkorn Cow Testing association members will tour the state Thursday, Aug. 18, and visit the college of agriculture and experiment station at that place instead of visiting Jefferson county farms on Tuesday, Aug. 19, as was published last week.

Members of the Darion association will also make the trip and all the members of the 21 associations in the state expect to be present.

It is going to come earlier or later, for we are going to start that central distributing plant," the committee stated.

Executive Committee.

Tuesday morning the county Farm Bureau executive committee will meet in the court house, starting at 9:30 o'clock. The township chairman will meet at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon and a special committee

CORN CLUB BOYS ON INSPECTION TRIP

Will See All the Fields Grown and Cared for by Members.

Between 40 and 50 youths from Rock county will make the tour of inspection of corn grown by the Rock county corn club starting Tuesday noon and ending Thursday night. The trip to all parts of the county will be made for the express purpose of recreation and instruction in corn growing and practical demonstrations in the field.

The boys will meet at the Y. M. C. A. at one o'clock and will be in charge of J. K. Arnett, county Y. M. C. A. secretary, who will have supervision of the trip. County Agent R. T. Glazier will accompany the youths on parts of the tour and it is hoped to have two agricultural experts from Madison.

Camp Out on Tour.

On the first day farm near Footville and Oxford will be visited. The touring party will camp Tuesday night near Shippensburg. Equipment will be carried on an automobile trailer.

On Wednesday the north section of the county will be visited.

Winona—The corn club competition will be decided later when the crops are harvested.

Series of Meetings.

With the completion of the field work, farmers now have a "little more time" to use for meetings and demonstrations. A series of important Farm Bureau and farm organization meetings are scheduled this week.

A committee of milk producers are active this week seeking to have the project of forming a co-operative creamery distributed for Janesville. The producers, who are members of the Chicago Marketing company, declare that they are going ahead and push the incorporation of a retail plant in Janesville.

Marketing company members are still shipping their milk to Beloit and continuing the strike against the Janesville Pure Milk company.

It is going to come earlier or later, for we are going to start that central distributing plant," the committee stated.

Executive Committee.

Tuesday morning the county Farm Bureau executive committee will meet in the court house, starting at 9:30 o'clock. The township chairman will meet at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon and a special committee ice meeting is to be held during the afternoon.

In Avon township there is to be a Farm Bureau picnic on Wednesday afternoon. County Agent R. T. Glazier will be in charge of the meeting.

Charles Marquette is in charge of the meeting.

On Wednesday night there is a lawn social at the Rock county farm, Fred Richards, Madison, and C. C. Culver, secretary of the Farm Bureau, will speak at this meeting.

TRINITY CHURCH TO CAMP TWO WEEKS

127 AT FAMILY REUNION, SUNDAY

ESPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE
Orfordville.—The annual Osgard reunion, it is noted, was held Sunday with an attendance of 127, representing four states—Minnesota, Illinois, Iowa and Wisconsin. The age of those present varied from one to 85 years. It was held in the grove and games and reminiscences filled the time.

arranged for. If the republican cabinet had decided to recommend immediate rejection of the terms, they argue, one day would have been sufficient, whereas if persuasion either way were necessary, some days would be required.

Another factor pointed to is that many of the fighting men on the republican side have returned to civil employment. The police declared the evidence they have gathered indicates these men would obey orders to return to the field, but that they would do so reluctantly. The votes of such men, optimist figure, would be for a settlement if a plebiscite were taken and these Castle officials believe the republican cabinet will propose a new system.

Similar to Method in Use in Keeping City Accounts.

Rock county bids fail to adopt a modern system of auditing and conducting of county business, for adoption of such a system is to be recommended to the county board at the November meeting.

County Clerk Howard W. Lee has conducted a short investigation of the feasibility of instituting the system here and is to have further demonstrations of the system's worth.

Was Too Intricate.

"I think personally I never was in favor of the method and auditing for it was too intricate and complicated," said the county clerk. "I am convinced that it has improved and is what we need for the county."

The county board at their August meeting authorized the county clerk to investigate the Walworth county system and all supervisors apparently were in favor of establishing the new system.

Similar to City.

While somewhat different from that adopted from the city, the proposed county system has many similar features. All county business is handled through system and all payments made by checks. Money cannot be paid at once, it is required and a check is made at any time on the county's finances.

Even road money will be paid through the central bookkeeping system, as well as fees and disbursements in the other county offices such as the register of deeds, county agent's office, clerk of court and treasurer.

SMUTS BEGS DE VALERA

TO ACCEPT DOMINION

London.—A letter from Gen. Jan Smuts to De Valera on the subject of Irish freedom was made public Sunday. In it the general begged the Irish president to accept the offer of a dominion status which the prime minister of South Africa has an exacting, giving in to a situation that was not desired, but has proved a good thing for the people of the Transvaal and other territories. He told De Valera the British government would never agree to a republic if Ireland.

REDUCE LIVESTOCK RATES ADVICE OF I. C. COMMISSION

Washington.—Freight rates on live stock in western and mountain Pacific territory were found by the Interstate Commerce Commission Monday to be unjust and unreasonable, but the commission suggested to the railroads that present rates should be reduced voluntarily to eighty per cent of the present rates, the reduction not to be less than fifty cents a hundred pounds. Rates as suggested may be published to become effective on not less than five days notice, the commission said.

Emergency reductions, granted last May, still are in effect, the commission said, and there is nothing to show that their materially increased traffic or that present rates have appreciably reduced the movement of livestock, which must be marketed as it matures.

EMPLOYEES OF CITY ENJOYING VACATIONS

Many of the young women employees at the city hall are taking their two weeks' vacations this month, following action of the council a week ago.

Mrs. Freda Zimmerman, office manager of the city water department, started on her vacation, Monday.

She and Mrs. Mayme Fox, plan a trip on the Great Lakes.

Miss Catherine Fox will be in charge of the office during her absence.

Miss Lou May Stoddard, clerk of the municipal court, is now on her vacation. Mrs. Editha Martin, visiting nurse, enjoys a month's vacation, is spending part of the time in Chicago. Miss Mary Sheridan, stenographer in the city engineering department, will go on her vacation next week. Mr. and Mrs. David Cunningham, the latter assistant to the city clerk, will leave Monday night for Omaha for a visit with her brother, Eustis Kelly.

COUNTY NURSE IS LISTING "POOR NUTS" OF ROCK COUNTY

This happened during the Janesville fair in the public health department.

A fond mother brought her young son into the booth to be weighed, measured, his mouth examined and these other mysterious investigations made by one of medical knowledge to determine whether the child is in good physical health.

The child watched the examination with interest and saw the county nurse, Miss Anna Luettich, write down queer notes on a pad. After it was all over the youth adopted a strange attitude and walked over to the mother.

"Ma, that woman called me a 'poor nut,'" wailed the boy. "She saw her write it down."

The mother at once demanded an explanation.

"Oh, yes, that 'poor nut' is an abbreviation for poor nutrition," explained the nurse.

THE GIRL WHO HAD NO CHANCE'

By Marion Rubincam

CHAPTER CX.
WITH OPENED EYES
"Who is it?" she asked. "You should have a name." She was a million enough with the routine service of the well-run hotels.

"Name given," the boy answered.

"I'll go ask."

A moment later he came back.

"Gentlemen won't give him name."

"Then I'm not here," Ruth answered, and went on with her dinner.

Something in her warned her to keep herself from visitors she did not know. There had been enough unpleasant scenes.

The boy started off, calling through the room the names of other people for whom he had messages. Ruth poured herself some coffee—and looked up to find Tim standing by her table.

"Do you mind if I sit down a moment?" he asked, his voice casual enough as he took the empty chair.

"I do mind," Ruth answered. "I think you might have known it."

"I phoned to your apartment, and got no answer," Tim went on as though Ruth had not spoken. "So I had you passed on the chance that you were still in the hotel. When the boy came back and asked my name I knew you were here. So I followed him and watched to see which table he went to first."

Ruth's waiter came in asking whether the "gentleman" would dine.

"The girl should not be impatiently called for," Tim said, watching him curiously out of sympathy with him.

"Of course I shouldn't have told her about myself; not being here to get you to do it, made you do it, and I didn't have the nerve to say so to her. Everything Gaby said about me was probably right. She despises me. I despise myself sometimes."

He went over to one of the chairs and threw himself down into it. Ruth stood by, silent, watching him curiously out of sympathy with him.

"It doesn't matter whether Myra was jealous or not," she said finally. "It's a very nasty thing to feel. I felt it too, about her—years ago. But I haven't given her any reason to be jealous of me, so I can't say I am very sorry for her."

"No, I suppose you're too happy to feel sorry about anything or anyone," Tim answered. "Myra told me—to be——she was very well engaged to this Williams. She said—before—you were in love with someone else and it always made me furious to hear that. I'd lose interest in you and it always made me furious to hear that."

"This time I believe her though—because of his card and the flowers he sent you in the tubs. You had roses last night—now you've got violets."

"And just why did you come at all?" she asked coldly.

"Because I want to see. I've got to see you."

"To apologize again, I suppose?"

"No. Don't think I know the no apology possible for the part I played you last night. I know I'm pretty bad sometimes, but I didn't know Myra was going to come down and make a row the way she did."

"Which doesn't excuse the fact that you were too weak to tell her the whole truth, and too weak to refrain from telling her part of it—the part you wanted told."

Ruth stood up.

"I'm going to my rooms now. So goodnight."

"I'm coming too," Tim answered.

And Ruth thought she saw curiosities upon his face. They were standing in the big lobby. If Tim was going to make a scene, at least she preferred to deal with him alone. There was something in his eyes, a certain recklessness that she did not like.

She felt equal to any situation,

only she did not want to have an audience of strangers. So she said nothing, but let him come up to her, smile with her.

In the living room she turned and faced him.

"I have three rooms here. This next one is my own private little sitting room. My maid is in there; she was there last night when you—"

Heart and Home Problems

By ELIZABETH THOMPSON. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of 18 and a girl friend of about the same age. We both seem to take a liking to the same young man whom we met at the same time. I like the boy, but I like the girl better, and that is why I want to give her to you. The young man seems to treat us both alike and shows no particular interest in either of us. I know that my girl friend likes this young gentleman as well as I do and he seems to like her also. What advice would you give?

FLOSSY.

Tell her that you realize sooner or later the young man will show preference for one of you, value her friend highly and that if his preference turns to her to understand your feelings will not be hurt. Doubtless she will feel the same about his turning to you. If each decides to give up to the other if necessary, there will be no hard feelings when the time comes.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young lad 20 years old. I am going with a few of my folks are against. We are together on the sky. He is no man for society and I love to dance and go out and have a good time. He wants me to run away with him and get married. I know it would kill my mother. I have tried to deserve her already. In time to come I would be happy with him. He folks to everything they can for me. Shall I tell her that I stand by my mother? I know he won't talk to my folks. Do you think I ought to respect a man who won't speak to them? MARY.

I do not like the things you say about the young man and would advise you to obey the wishes of your parents. A man who will not speak to your parents is not the kind of a man you want to marry. You may be sure that no would treat you in the same way after marriage. Besides

I cannot say who you are the victim of infatuation or real love. It may be that you have been building your ideals around each other all this time, which will fall when you become better acquainted.

By FRANCES REGO MONTGOMERY

"Run along and help catch Billy," said Mrs. West, "for it is almost time for the race in which he is to run."

Violet waited for no second telling, but was off like a bird on the wing. Her mother and friend stood where she had stood, and the men who would catch the silly old Billy.

For once in his life Billy was surprised when he ran into Violet and nearly upset her as she unexpectedly appeared at the corner of the old shed just when he was going to run around that end to get away from the men he had been watching, come to catch him.

"Don't be in such a hurry, Mr. Billy," said Violet as she held on to his horns, and recovered her breath after the unexpected butt he had given her when she appeared so suddenly.

"I am ashamed of you, Billy, to act as you do when every one at the fair is looking for you to appear in the race. Why can't you be like the others?"

While Billy was being led back to the shed where he was to be harnessed and have a fresh rub down before he raced, Mr. West and Violet went back to the grand stand to watch Fleet, for it was her turn now.

Their seats were directly opposite the judge's stand so they had a chance to watch the start and the finish. There were three 4-year-old colts that were entered for this race and it would have been difficult to tell which was the prettiest when they entered the ring with the sun shining brightly on their glossy coats. There was Daisy, a bright bay colt with a white streak down her nose and white foot; Fleet, a dark quarter horse, and Sorrel, a chestnut colt because her mane and tail were so light while his body was dark, come glossy Fleet. On each colt's back perched a little black jockey wearing a cap and sash of his master's colors.

Several starts were attempted before they were allowed to "go," but at last the magic words, "They are off," rang out, and from that second until the end of the race Violet said she knew she did not breathe; she was so excited and afraid that Fleet would not win. At one moment she was up and clapping her hands because Fleet was ahead the next, silent when Daisy passed her. Then Fleet, who did not even with Daisy, the colt and did not seem to gain a step, then—horror of horrors—was tiring on them both and, yes, he was passing them. What could be the matter with Fleet? Why didn't she run faster and pass him?

Fleet should never be kept on metal dishes or any sort. Be sure that the crockery or glass plate you put the fish on is free from cracks. Cracks in old crockery dishes absorb grease and odors and should never be used to cook food, especially flavored food like fish.

It is always an advantage to keep soap on hand some time before using it, as it is longer when it is thoroughly wet. To dry it, it should be removed from the wrapper and placed on a shelf where air will circulate, but where dust will not reach it.

Butter should never be kept in the wooden dish in which tub butter is usually placed by the grocer. It should be removed to glass or porcelain at once and kept covered. It is better not to keep butter in the paper or cardboard containers after it has been once opened.

Fish should never be kept on metal dishes or any sort. Be sure that the crockery or glass plate you put the fish on is free from cracks. Cracks in old crockery dishes absorb grease and odors and should never be used to cook food, especially flavored food like fish.

There is nothing better to relieve the torment of eczema and similar ills and restore health.

"Daisy," and now the other two colts were nearly up to her and this did not hurry her in the least.

"Mammie, I shall burst if Fleet doesn't stretch herself out and run faster."

"Don't worry, Violet. Just wait and see what will happen when Fleet gets to the wire—about a quarter mile past."

"It will be too late then, Papa. She will be so far behind that she cannot catch up."

"Oh, no, she won't. Cricket is only making her save her strength for the last quarter mile."

(But now you must wait another day to find out who won the race.)

Sharon

(By Gazette Correspondent)

Sharon—Mary Janette Grey, little daughter of Dr. and Mrs. T. J. Crew, entertained at a postponed birthday party Friday afternoon. Her birthday was in June but, by account of so many cases of mumps she could not celebrate. The afternoon was spent in playing games, after which ice cream and cake were served. Thirty-three guests were present. A large crowd attended the ball game here Friday. —Mrs. and Mrs. Lloyd Tarr and little daughter Morrison, Ill., are visiting Mrs. Tarr mother, Mrs. Florence Chester, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Peters, Eroica, Ws., are moving into the Fred Sherman house recently occupied by Mr. Peter J. Purdon.

It doesn't matter whether Myra was jealous or not," she said finally. "It's a very nasty thing to feel. I felt it too, about her—years ago. But I haven't given her any reason to be jealous of me, so I can't say I am very sorry for her."

"No, I suppose you're too happy to feel sorry about anything or anyone," Tim answered. "Myra told me—to be——she was very well engaged to this Williams. She said—before—you were in love with someone else and it always made me furious to hear that. I'd lose interest in you and it always made me furious to hear that."

"And just why did you come at all?" she asked coldly.

"Because I want to see. I've got to see you."

"To apologize again, I suppose?"

"No. Don't think I know the

no apology possible for the part I played you last night. I know I'm pretty bad sometimes, but I didn't know Myra was going to come down

and make a row the way she

did."

"Which doesn't excuse the fact that you were too weak to tell her the whole truth, and too weak to refrain from telling her part of it—the part you wanted told."

Ruth stood up.

"I'm going to my rooms now. So

goodnight."

"I'm coming too," Tim answered.

And Ruth thought she saw curiosities upon his face. They were standing in the big lobby. If Tim was going to make a scene, at least she preferred to deal with him alone. There was something in his eyes, a certain recklessness that she did not like.

She felt equal to any situation, only she did not want to have an audience of strangers. So she said nothing, but let him come up to her, smile with her.

In the living room she turned and faced him.

"I have three rooms here. This next

one is my own private little sitting room. My maid is in there; she was

there last night when you—"

Dean Takes Two in Race Finals by Remarkable Driving

Copyright 1920 by Geo. McManus.

Is Fined $100 for Fight and Then Shows Ability; Azoff Takes 2:17 Trot

With sensational riding necessitating four extra heats because of the crack work of Young Dean of the Randall stables of Chicago, the 1921 harness meeting of the "Lexington of the North" came to an end at the local tracks Saturday. Had it not been for rains during the mid-week, local tracks Saturday. Had it not been for rains during the mid-week, the officials declare that the session would have surpassed any ever held here.

Dean walked off with two firsts during the afternoon but he had to prove himself the best driver of the day to accomplish the feat. Vogel proved himself the best driver of the day to accomplish the feat. Vogel of Soden Mills played him a close second for horsemanship.

Thrills in Every Race.

The 2:25 pace and the 2:25 consolation trot were evenly matched for thrills. Jim Woodward, Dean driving, took the pace in five exciting heats and Hollywood Mac, also driven by Dean, the trot in the same number of heats. Vogel drove George Azoff to three firsts in the 2:17 trot, being forced to go hard each time to maintain the lead.

Saturday's races were by far the finest of the meeting. There was not one of them that did not require the entire distance of the mile to decide the winner. Finishes were hair-raising with many of the heats captured by narrow margins.

In the first race of the 2:25 pace, Minor Direct, Adelma up, broke at the start and Gards, first pilot, took the lead. Dean, first pilot, and Hollywood Mac, also driven by Dean, took the trot in the same number of heats. Vogel drove George Azoff to three firsts in the 2:17 trot, being forced to go hard each time to maintain the lead.

Dean Given Reception.

After being held to a second position in the first and second heats of the 2:25 pace, Dean created a storm of applause when he captured the $500 purse in the next three heats. His horse, Jim Woodward insisted on breaking into a run costing him the first two heats. In the third heat, Ordella Patch (Hill), who had taken the first two, again was heading when Jim Woodward, pushing hard, went ahead at the half mile. Hill whipped Ordella Patch to the limit in a great race that ended when his horse broke on the homestretch.

When Woodward again broke in the first turn in the fourth heat, dropping to third, Dean let him out, gained the head of the pack at the three-quarters and romped home with a three-length victory thus narrowing the field down to Ordella Patch and Jim Woodward.

The start of the fifth and finishing heat was neck and neck. Jim Woodward, again in the poll, two lengths ahead in the first turn. Ordella Patch then drove Vogel could do in strenuous headwork to win. Driver Hutton was ordered off the track by the judges in this event because his horse, Tom Carlyle, holds a mark of 2:124.

Adelma Watts, winner of the 2:25 trot Tuesday in straight heats, jumped to first in the first heat and to drop to second, back to first and to drop to the home stretch in. George Azoff lay down in a marvelous spurt under the wire first by half a length.

See-Saw Results.

Four started in the 2:25 consolation trot for losers of the heats and Dame Fortune was judge for the first three heats. Dame did not prove to be much to the taste in the first heat which was won handily by Volga Chimes (Johnson) while High Bell (Wallace) was distanced leaving only three in the event. Dame commenced to show to the speed of Hollywood Mac in the second heat, a stirring exhibition. Although he was ahead throughout, after J. Spencer had overtaken Poor Colini into the first position at the three-quarters when Hollywood Mac broke into a pass, came back into second and then dropped to third. The victory for the heat went to Light Foot Bellini by but a length over Volga Chimes.

Hollywood Mac again broke in the third heat after leading. For a half a mile the positions remained to be changed, when Hollywood Mac, with Volga Chimes second, and George Azoff third, at the seven-eights and George Azoff trotted in the winner while the fans applauded loudly for "Smiling" Vogel.

Dean Pined $100.

Driver Dean was fined $100 by the race officials for his part in the first heat on Thursday following the 2:25 trot, according to an announcement Saturday by Sheriff W. C. Robbins, president of the C. R. Horning chapter of Minneapolis was fined $50.

Dean apologized to the officials, the fair association and to the public.
